The screenshot shows a web browser window with the address bar displaying `localhost:1313/project/example/`. The browser's tab bar shows several tabs, including `index.md`. The website's navigation bar includes links for `Academic`, `Home`, `Posts`, `Projects`, `Talks`, `Publications`, and `Contact`. The main content area features a post titled `Intel` dated `Apr 27, 2016`. Below the title is a large image of the Intel logo. The post's content begins with the heading `Let's talk about Intel!` and a paragraph of text. To the right of the browser window, a code editor displays the Markdown source for the post, showing the title, date, and the beginning of the text.

35 For sure, many people know the prototype of the emergence of successful technology firms: a modest beginning, a struggle with circumstances, outsider founders and more. For example, it is enough to recall Bill Gates with Microsoft or Steve Jobs with Apple, who started their activities literally in basements or garages. But Intel was created differently.
36
37 The founders of the company were not young ambitious rebels, but respectable men who had a solid reputation in the industry at that time. Gordon Moore and Robert Noyce did not need to look for money for years to launch the enterprise, instead they collected $ 2.3 million in half a day. Soon they were joined as a co-founder by Andrew Grove, who for many years became the head of production at Intel. And although Robert Noyce himself often called the company a "three-headed monster," in fact, another person was present during its creation - marketing star Boh Graham.

39 # What seems to me important and interesting in the structure of the company.
